New York University Africa House Honours Ghana's Tourism Minister

Accra, April 19, GNA - The New York University (NYU) Africa House has honored Ghana's Minister of Tourism, Culture & Creative Arts, Mrs. Elizabeth Ofori-Adjare, for her leadership and dedication towards the promotion of sustainable tourism in Ghana at their inaugural Africa House Gala in New York.

The New York University Africa House-Partnership Award was held to reward partners of the NYU who had played diverse roles in their pursuit of sustainable tourism in Africa and the world.

The Gala brought together the academia, business leaders, opinion leaders, and politicians to celebrate the achievements of the NYU.

The accompanying citation to the Minister read: "Your dedicated vision, leadership, and collaboration with Africa House over the years have been inspiring to NYU Faculty and students and the greater New York Community.

"We commend you for your significant service and achievements in developing and promoting sustainable tourism in Ghana, and hope our partnership will continue to grow in scope and have a long-lasting impact on the tourism sector and people of Ghana," he said.

Mrs. Ofosu-Adjare, receiving the award, expressed her appreciation to the NYU-Africa House for the recognition and dedicated the award to President John Mahama and the hard working staff of the Ministry of Tourism, Culture & Creative Arts.

She said the collaboration between Ghana and NYU - Africa House would go a long way to improve the lives of people who lived in the rural community.

She said the vision of the Ministry of Tourism, Culture & Creative Arts was to promote sustainable tourism for development.

Mrs Ofosu-Adjare paid tribute to Prof Nyarkoh, the Director of NYU - Africa and his team for the enormous work they were doing in Kumawu.

Mrs. Ofosu-Adjare said their work would help in the promotion of tourism in Ghana and the partnership between Ghana and NYU - Africa House would grow even much stronger.

Other recipients on the night included the Kumawu Community, whose award was received by the Queen mother Ms. Theresa Effia Atta.
